The instruction language at the Faculty of Law in Tübingen is German. Only very few courses are held in English. Therefore, students coming to the Faculty of Law, Tübingen University, must have an adequate knowledge of the German language. A mandatory requirement is a language level of B1/B2. This can be achieved with a B1 level at home and an additional compact language course. This so called starter course in Tübingen for ERASMUS and exchange students is a challenging 5-weeks course including intercultural programs, helping to get to know the country and its customs better. Students receive also help registering at the university and getting established in Tübingen. For the whole time the students have to speak only German, so that the language skills will improve rapidly. In this short course students learn as much German as in a semester-long programme.

Incoming teaching staff must be individually accepted by the Faculty of Law. The acceptance will be based on the candidate's working plan and its adequacy to the teaching programme of the Faculty.
